

Latin American Mining Monitoring Programme

LAMMP aims to inspire leadership among rural and indigenous women, affected by irresponsible and destructive development activities including in the areas of natural resource extraction. We believe that rural and indigenous women are among the world's most excluded peoples, and are confronted with a number of barriers that exclude them from decision-making processes that make them poorer and expose them further to risks and vulnerabilities. The organisation works in several Latin American countries: Bolivia, Ecuador, Honduras, Mexico, Peru, and Venezuela.
